RELEASED BY KIDNAPPERS
Pleasanton, Kansas, May 31.—Mrs. M. J. Wood, her daughter Louise, 17, and Clarice Wears, of Higgins, Texas, who were kidnapped by escaping prisoners from the state penitentiary yesterday, were released here today. They were unharmed, and except for sleepiness, appeared to be none the worse for their harrowing experience. Captain Stanley Beatty of Kansas City police department, left immediately to return the women to their homes. M. J. Wood, husband of Mrs. Wood, who has kept a sleepless vigil at the police headquarters since his family was taken prisoners, returned to the Wood home to prepare breakfast for them.

EXPECT MORE SENSATIONS
Washington, D. C., May 31.—The publication of a new "Who's Who" of J. P. Morgan's "favored clients" was expected to furnish a fresh sensation today at the Senate banking inquiry into which a Broadway murder and two mysteries were injected over the Memorial Day holiday.

The mysteries involved two stock transactions by the Morgan firm, perfectly legal and proper, but spiced with tremendous sensations. One related to a private sale of stock by Morgan to one of America's best known political leaders, recently deceased. The other touched a prominent business man who bought one Morgan stock at cut rate prices and then repudiated a second offer on the ground its purchase was unethical. Both mysteries were to be solved by the bright light of publicity this week.

The Broadway murder of Dot King, a night club butterfly, was injected into the inquiry when it became the basis of an attack on Ferdinand Pecora, brilliant Senate counsel.

J. C. Hackett, of New York, was reported to have sent to members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, a complaint attacking Pecora's handling of the murder, while assistant district attorney of New York state.

John Kearsley Mitchell, son-in-law of E. T. Stotesbury, a Morgan partner, was a friend of the murdered girl. The committee was unimpressed by the attack and was prepared to ignore it.

HYPERION WINS DERBY

Epsom Downs, England, May 31.—In honor of the family the classic was named after, Lord Derby's "Hyperion" won the English Derby here today. TO GIVE ASSISTANCE IN FLOWER ARRANGEMENTS

Four Sessions Planned For Home Decorators At Trevose Center

JUNE FIRST AND SECOND

TREVOSE, May 31.—Assistance will be given home decorators and prospective exhibitors at flower shows in improving their skill in the art of flower arrangement when Trevose Horticultural Society sponsors a practice school in Flower Arrangement in Community House, June 1 and 2, under direction of Miss Lucille Grant Smith, extension instructor in the Department of Floriculture at Cornell University.

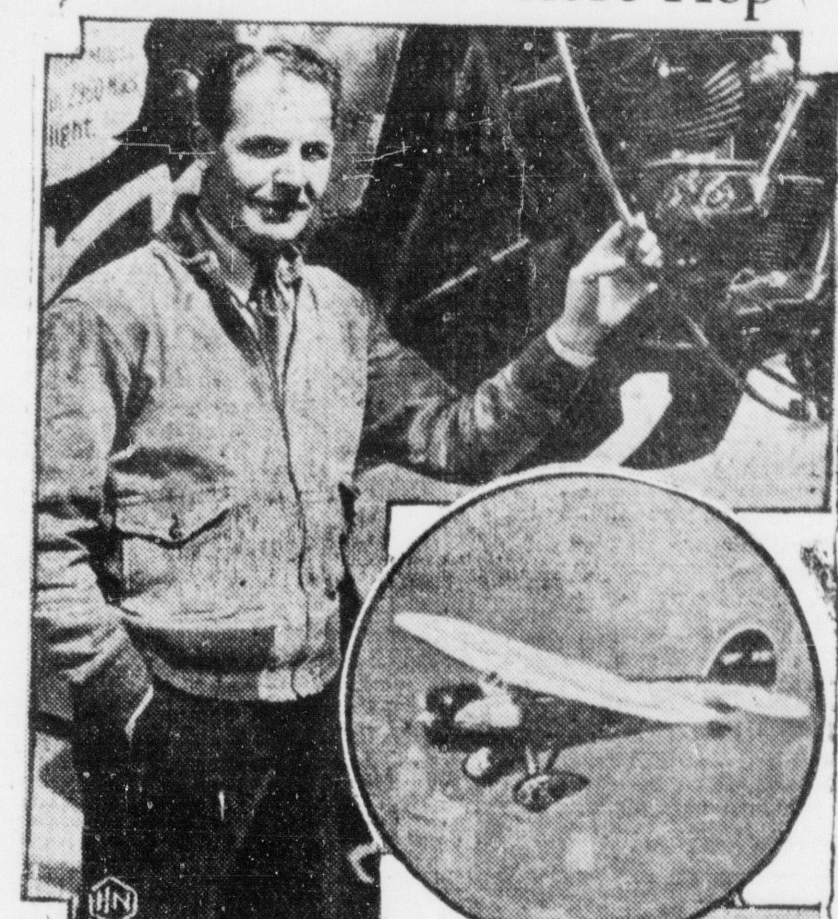

Four meetings are arranged: Thursday morning from 10:30 to 12:30; Thursday afternoon, 2:30 to 4:30; Friday afternoon, 2:30 to 4:30; and Friday evening, 7:30 to 9:30, daylight saving time.

Essential points in flower arrangement will be discussed, and arrangements prepared by members of the classes will be criticised. Members of Garden Clubs and all others interested in flower arrangement are privileged to attend any of the sessions. A nominal charge will be made for each session attended. Registrations for the sessions may be secured from Mrs. J. V. Hare, Trevose.

Anyone may attend and receive the benefits of one or more sessions, although the two sessions each day constitute a complete course of instruction.

Class members may take materials and floral arrangements, as some of these will be criticised and rearranged by Miss Smith at each session. This is the first time that instructions of this character have been available at such a nominal cost, and is an opportunity that should be appreciated by all interested in the art of floral arrangement.

PLANNED ATTACK ALONG WIDE FRONT CONSIDERED

Such Will Have To Be Program at Economic Conference in London

IS EXPERTS' OPINION

(This is the second of a series of five articles in which International News Service surveys the problems to be considered by the World Economic Conference opening in London on June 12. Today's article deals with the general program of the Conference, as formulated by the special organizing committee of the League of Nations.—International News Service.)

By H. K. Reynolds
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, May 31.—(INS).—To solve the world economic crisis, the London Conference will have to launch a concerted attack along a wide front—a policy of "nibbling" will never succeed.

This is the considered opinion of the European and American experts who mapped out the conference agenda, pursuant to the Lausanne resolution of July 15, 1932.

This resolution contained the following main questions for the consideration of the Conference:

(a) Financial Questions:
Monetary and Credit Policy;
Exchange difficulties;
The level of prices;
The movement of capital.

(b) Economic Questions:
Improved conditions of production and trade interchanges, with particular attention to:
Tariff policy;
Prohibitions and restrictions of importation and exportation, quotas and other barriers to trade;
Producers agreements.

The experts, at the outset, saw that action in the field of economic relations depended so much upon monetary and financial action, that concerted measures would be necessary in both fields if real progress was to be made in either.

With this principle in view, the League of Nations experts, under the chairmanship of J. A. Trip, and including representatives of the United States, Great Britain, Germany, Belgium, France, China, India, Italy and Japan, summarized as follows the main questions which the Governments should consider:

"1. In the field of monetary and credit policy, the objective must be the restoration of an effective international monetary standard to which the countries which have abandoned the gold standard can wisely adhere. Each Government must, of course, remain free to decide when and under what conditions it could adopt such a standard. Moreover, it will be necessary to provide effective safeguards against such a restoration of the gold standard leading to a fresh breakdown.

"2. The unprecedented fall of commodity prices in recent years has caused a growing disequilibrium between costs and prices, has immensely increased the real burden of all debts and fixed charges, has made business more and more unprofitable, and has resulted in a continuous and disastrous increase of unemployment throughout the world. Some increase in the level of world prices is highly desirable, and would be the first sign of world recovery.

"One of the methods that should be considered is the continuation and development, where monetary conditions permit, of a general policy of easy money designed to promote a healthy expansion of business.

HORSE RUNS AWAY TWICE IN ONE DAY

(By "The Stroller")

Constable Thomas Crawford had a busy day yesterday and in addition to aiding in raiding a still in Emilie he stopped the same horse which ran away twice yesterday morning.

Crawford was doing traffic duty at Bristol Pike and the entrance to the Bristol Cemetery. The horse of John Carr was grazing in a nearby field. When the parade of the Delker-Watkins Post came along Carr's horse dashed out onto the road and was stopped by Crawford.

The animal was led back to the field and turned loose.

Then along came the Bracken Post and Schumacher Post parade. Again the horse ran away and out onto the road where he was stopped by Crawford and again returned to the field.

Morrisville Expects To Cut The School Tax

MORRISVILLE, May 31.—Substantial reductions in Morrisville's school taxes were assured Monday night at a meeting of the Board of Education with representatives of various civic and other adult organizations. The tentative school budget, now scheduled for official adoption tomorrow night, calls for a reduction of $1 under the $4 per capita school tax, and a drop from 27 to 25 mills in the school property tax.

Flat 10 per cent reductions in teachers' and other school employees salaries were approved by the session, with objections offered to teachers' cuts by only a small minority. Slashes of $100 each in the salaries of the school boards' secretary and treasurer were also provided in the budget figures, to make possible the savings. Other items bringing about the tax drop, include elimination of music, art and health programs in the grade schools next year, and the dropping of at least two teachers in the high school grades.

The Board reported all teachers had been paid to date and were scheduled to be paid for June at the close of the school year, thus officially putting at rest apprehension that Morrisville schools would have to close this month as was first seen possible because of a $11,000 cut in the State school appropriation and tax arrears of about $20,000. Official adoption of the budget must be done by the end of this month, and with yesterday a holiday, tonight remains as the dead line for final approval.

Deeper Delaware River Channel Is Now Urged

Bristol's chances for a still further deepening of the Delaware River have been greatly enhanced by reason of a recommendation to Congress of Major General Lytle Brown, chief of Army Engineers. General Brown approved a $3,828,900 project, calling for a channel 25 feet deep and 300 feet wide on Monday.

In making his recommendation General Brown overrode an adverse report by the division engineer. He said he agreed with the district engineer and the Army Board of Engineers that the development of the river area involved was fully justified. He estimated annual maintenance costs to be $65,000.

VETERANS PAY TRIBUTE TO DECEASED COMRADES

Services Held at Various Cemeteries in This Area

FLOWERS DECK GRAVES

Veteran organizations and school children in this area paid fitting tribute yesterday to those deceased who had fought for their country.

Graves were decked with flowers, flags placed upon them and speeches made which did honor to those who did service for their country.

In Bristol, the Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, Auxiliary, guests, Boy and Girl Scouts, Cadets, and Bracken Post Bugle Corps along with the Joseph A. Schumacher Post, and Auxiliary, Croydon Post Cadets, guests of the Post, and Col. J. M. Gosline Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans and Daughters of America visited the Bristol cemeteries and held exercises.

At the Bristol cemetery there was an elaborate program given. The invocation was by the Rev. Andrew J. Solia and the address by Henry A. Swartz, past commander of Tioga Post of the Legion and vice-commander of Philadelphia County Council of the American Legion.

The benediction was by the Rev. Gibson, Eddington Episcopal Church.

Mr. Swartz in his address told of the work of the Legion and explained that it was not only a war-time organization but a peace-time one as well. He touched briefly upon the fact that the Legion is endeavoring to guide the male youth of America so that they will love their native country, respect its laws and honor its traditions and see that they are upheld and perpetuated.

The Schumacher Post then held exercises over the grave of the one in whose honor their post is named.

The Legion and Sons of Veterans visited St. Mark's Cemetery and held exercises there.

Delker-Watkins Post, No. 2385, Veterans Foreign Wars, along with Delker Post of Frankford, the latter's life and drum corps, cadets, and "Khaki Shirts" held Memorial Day exercises with a parade and special exercises here.

Taps were blown by a member of the Khaki Shirt Brigade, and echo played by Sergeant Bugler Harry Holden, of the Delker-Watkins Post. The graves of Comrades Delker and Watkins were decorated by members of the post. The Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton officiated at the service.

STILL AT EMILIE RAIDED; ONE MAN HELD UNDER BAIL

Alcohol Plant is Found on The Farm of John
Budahazy

500-GALLON CAPACITY

Russo and Crawford Discover
Place Down in Hollow on Chicken Foot Road

County and Bristol Township authorities yesterday raided a 500-gallon still at Emilie and took into custody one man who claims to be the owner of the property on which the still was located.

The man gave the name of John Budahazy, 61. He was given a hearing before Justice of Peace Leo Lynn at Edgely and held in $1,000 bail for court.

The Budahazy farm is located down in a hollow back from the road leading from Chicken Foot to the Emilia Road. The still was located in a building a short distance from the house.

There were four large wooden vats, two of them sunk deep into the ground with a combined capacity of about 20,000 gallons of mash. They were all full. It is estimated that the still had a capacity of 500 gallons every 24 hours, as it was of the continuous type.

One five-gallon can of finished alcohol was found along with a number of empty five-gallon cans, 12 bags of coke, one upright steel boiler ten feet high, water tank, two steam pumps and some miscellaneous articles.

There was fire beneath the boiler when Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and Township Constable Thomas Crawford drove into the place.

Budahazy was in the yard a short distance from the still, when the officers blew their whistles. He met the officers and said he knew nothing about the still; that he had rented the place to a group of men, whose names he did not know.

The entire plant was dismantled and hauled to Doylestown.

Lad Arrested Gave Police Name of Another Boy

Walter Mucha, 9, 250 Hayes street, when taken into custody by the police late Sunday night and charged with the burning of paper on the second floor of the high school building, gave the police the name of John Cribben, 267 East Circle, instead of his own name. Consequently the name of Cribben appeared in the news story concerning the incident. Cribben was in no way implicated.

Mucha and Edward Elenka, 10, 262 Hayes street, were given a hearing by Justice of Peace James Guy and put on three months' probation.

Mucha also changed one of his original statements made to the police which was to the effect that Elenka procured the matches. Mucha admitted to Judge Guy that he was the one who obtained the matches and not Elenka.

Judge Guy also ordered each boy to be in his own home at nine o'clock each night, during that period. Each lad is also to report to the authorities once each week during the period of their probation.

CARRY IT THROUGH

There is something in the contention of L'intransigent that "The economic conference is condemned to failure in advance if the nations do not first reach an accord on essential problems."

The Paris newspaper believes there is not sufficient time between now and June 12 for agreements to be reached and believes the conference should be postponed "until later."

Its pessimism is due largely to the armed conflicts in progress in several parts of the world, the disarmament conference deadlock and the unsettled condition of the exchange markets.

These undoubtedly are obstacles, but they do not necessarily doom the conference to failure. There is a possibility that they might in reality act as a spur to the nations in the conference in arriving at agreements. Prospects for an early improvement in any of the conditions mentioned by the Paris newspaper are lacking. It seems more likely that all may grow worse unless concerted action be taken somewhere looking to their betterment.

To postpone the conference until all possible factors entering into it were favorable would mean, in all probability, an indefinite postponement. Certain general policies can be agreed to by the principal nations in advance of the conference. Some progress along this line apparently was made in the Washington discussions between Mr. Roosevelt and foreign representatives. Details can only be worked out satisfactorily in a formal meeting.

Announcement now of the postponement of the conference would have an unsettling influence upon world opinion and would hamper the efforts of those working to make the discussions a success.

HEALTH FROM THE SOIL

Man lived for uncounted centuries close to the soil, he toiled on it, and apparently drew strength from it. People seem healthier when they are at work on the surface of the earth. When they are separated from earth, and labor in structures of wood, stone, and other substances, something seems lacking in physical stimulus.

Every hour of work that you put in on your home grounds will not merely produce beauty and usefulness, but it should have physically beneficial results. The fresh open air and the invigorating rays of the sun have a stimulating power.

Farmers usually live long lives. In spite of their prolonged hours of toil, greatly exceeding those of indoor workers, and though many of them live in unsanitary homes, yet their contact with the soil and their outdoor life give them exceptional vigor. Anyone who has room enough around his home for a garden can gain some of this benefit by laboring over that space.

We hope these laws barring return of the saloon will not bar return of the free lunch counter.

Paraphrase by the paternalist: "The government at Washington still gives—and gives and gives."

You can trust a majority. That is, you can trust it not to remain a majority if it isn't right.

There are just two plans. Either the people use the government or the government uses the people.

"STOLEN LOVE"

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Joan Hastings, seventeen, and beautiful, lives a secluded life with her two old maiden aunts in a run-down house. She falls in love with Bill Martin, a garage worker. Meanwhile, the aunts plan to send Joan away to school. Bill tells the girl that he's very poor and it may be years before he can think of marrying, but she vows she will wait for him. Joan is overjoyed when news arrives that she is to go away to school, and writes a note to Bill asking him to meet her. Through a series of unforeseen circumstances she is unable to keep the appointment, and later that night they meet in the rose garden. Overcome at the thought of parting, they ardently pledge their love for one another. Later Bill again meets Joan and has a haunting fear that Dolores Gerwin, wife of the garage owner, has seen him with her. On her last evening Joan waits in vain for Bill to say goodbye. She rushes to his home the next morning. As the door is opened to her knock, she hears someone weeping inside.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER X.
"Oh, what is it?" Joan cried. "What happened to Bill—tell me!" And she brushed past the two at the door, and ran into the kitchen, where the little old lady wept steadily and hopelessly in the corner.

"Well, I never!" Eunice whispered. "It's Miss Van Fleet's niece!"

Now Joan was kneeling beside the old lady, her arms clasped tight around her fat waist. "Tell me how it happened—oh, please, tell me—where is he?"

"I'll tell you," Eunice said suddenly. "It's Bergoni's—the milk people you know. At least, that's what they call themselves. They hired my husband to drive a milk truck—milk!" she laughed mirthlessly. "Moonshine—that's what it was. Imposing on an honest man that way."

"But Bill—where's Bill?"

"It was whiskey I tell you!" Eunice repeated, impatiently. "They got caught—Federal authorities—don't you see?"

But Joan didn't see. She looked from one to the other, not comprehending. Oh, if only Bill's mother would talk—she knew—she knew—

"You see—I wasn't able to drive last night," the man with the swollen jaw said heavily. "Bill—drove for me. He was exceeding the speed limits—driving like crazy trying to get back early."

"He's dead—I knew it!" Joan thought wildly. "Trying to get back to me. Oh, Bill—Bill—"

"So it was more or less his own fault," the man finished judiciously. "Otherwise they'd never have stopped him. They didn't have anything on Bergoni before that."

There was another long pause. Then the old lady straightened up and wiped her eyes. She looked at Joan a long time. "You don't understand, dearie. They've taken my boy away. To jail!"

Joan was beginning to understand. The sick man had a job driving a milk truck—at least he thought it was a milk truck, but it wasn't—it was a truck full of whiskey. And because his tooth hurt him so much he asked Bill to drive for him, and the Federal authorities wouldn't believe Bill didn't know it was whiskey. . . . and they took him away. . . . and put him in jail.

"Oh, but they'll let him go—the people that hired him will tell that Bill didn't know. They wouldn't be mean enough to let an innocent man suffer."

The sick man whom they called Milt, shook his head gloomily. "Those people will be busy saving their own skins. Besides, they didn't hire the kid, they hired me, see?"

"Milt!" Eunice cried in a high, thin voice. "Did you know it wasn't milk? If I thought you did—Oh—"

Milt groaned and clutched his aching jaw. "Now, my own wife accuses me. Oh, well—I can stand it. I guess—it don't matter. The babies still love their Daddy. Come to Daddy, Rosalie. . . . Ruby."

But the two fat little girls in rompers were too busy chasing each other round and round the kitchen. Bang—Rosalee bumped her head. Her piercing scream rang out. "I know you'd do it!" Eunice cried. "What did Mama tell you? Poor precious. . . . Slap—she reached out and boxed Ruby's ear smartly. "Didn't I tell you not to play rough? Didn't I—didn't I?"

And now they were both shrieking. The baby in the bedroom woke up and cried lustily too. The parrot in the cage on the floor guzzled her bread and squawked.

"Billie! Billie! . . . awk . . . awk . . . Billie! Gracious—late again!" Joan stood bewildered, holding tight to Mrs. Martin's little red hand. Bill's mother was the only one who was real, the others were just people out of a nightmare, a terrible, mixed up nightmare.

"What are we going to do?" she kept repeating dully. "We've got to do something—"

"I'm trying to think," the old lady said at last, "but seems like there's something wrong with my head. I never had any trouble like this before. . . . all kinds of bad luck, but nothing like this." The tears were streaming down her face again. "Bill was always such a good boy, never any trouble. . . . and now he's—in jail."

"Oh, Ma, don't carry on so!" Eunice shrieked above the racket. "Milt and I feel as bad as you do—"

"He shouldn't have been speeding—and he wouldn't have got caught!" Milt broke in harshly. Joan blanched. Her hand flew to her throat, nervously. It was true, it was her fault Bill was in jail. He was coming to her, fast as the wind. If he hadn't been speeding to her, they wouldn't have stopped him, wouldn't have known what was in the milk cans. . . .

She couldn't take her eyes off Milt's little piercing black ones. They were boring right into her rooding brain. . . . His long yellow finger was pointing at her too. . . . "Say—how did you know about all this, eh? He was trying to finish the run, and see you—eh? After ten o'clock at night, eh? Pretty late—"

"Milt!" Eunice cried sharply. "It's Miss Van Fleet's niece, I tell you! Are you crazy, Milt? Talking like that—" she turned to Joan, her voice like honey. "You mustn't mind him Miss—Miss—"

"Hastings."

"Miss Hastings—he's nearly crazy with that tooth of his, and all your trouble. You must excuse him. And excuse the kitchen, too. I didn't get around to cleaning it this week, with Mama laid up, too, and all—"

"Oh, but he's quite right," Joan said in her clear, honest voice. "He was coming to see me—that's how I knew something had happened."

They all stared at her. To think of Bill, going with Miss Van Fleet's niece! "Well!" Eunice said, gustily. "The rich Van Fleets. . . . Well!"

Old Mrs. Martin mopped her eyes and looked at Joan again. With trembling fingers she smoothed the thin gray hair drawn so tightly in to the little hard walnut at the back of her head. She smiled up at Joan proudly, and said, "He's bright too—Bill is!"

Now the man was talking again. "Bill—maybe Miss Hastings could help out, if she's an old friend of Bill's."

"You mean—money?"

He licked his lips nervously. "I'd take care of all that myself, only, just at the present—financially embarrassed. . . ."

His gimlet eyes were boring into her again. "We are too—financially embarrassed," she said slowly. "But do you mean—that money would get Bill out—"

He nodded. "Money will get anybody out—of anything."

"But I only have twelve dollars, left over from my ticket!" His face fell.

"How much?" she cried eagerly. "Tell me—quick—how much?"

"Oh fifty anyway—"

"I'll go home and see. I think—I hope—Oh I know I can get the money! I'll be right back—wait—"

She ran all the way home all the way up the high, dusty hill. Her face was white, her breath was coming in terrible, aching rushes, her bright hair clung close to her face in tight, wet curls.

She burst into the dining room, holding her side and panting. "Can I have my ticket to sell—will you let me have my ticket?"

Heeley was just bringing in the coffee. She held it poised, dangerously, over Aunt Babe's head. Her jaw dropped. "For the land sakes—what happened?"

"Go and wash your face this minute!" Aunt Evvie commanded. "What do you mean by coming to breakfast looking like that?"

Joan took a step toward the door, when she wheeled defiantly. "I haven't got time. Listen—Aunt Evvie—listen—I'm in a terrible hurry—I've got to go—"

"You've got to lean yourself up before you talk to me!" Evvie thundered.

Aunt Babe pulled Evvie's skirt. "She's sick—delirious—don't you see, Evvie? It's the excitement. Joan—let me see your tongue!"

Evvie reached over and touched Joan's hot hand. "Fever! Heeley, Joan—my thermometer, will you?"

Joan—for heaven's sake—sit down. Don't wiggle. If you're sick, you're sick—though what we're going to do about your ticket. . . . I'll have to go over myself I guess. . . . and wire Belle. . . . of course this had to happen today, of all days—"

"Aunt Evvie," Joan burst out desperately. "I'm not sick. I've been running, that's all. I need money—terribly—"

"Money!" Babe cried. "Evvie—what?"

"Will you let me tend to this, Babe?" The child's ravine. Joan, will you sit down? I suppose I'll have to get a doctor—"

With a tremendous jerk Joan freed herself from Evvie's restraining hand. She was still panting, but she managed to talk more

Planned Attack Along Wide Front Considered

"The abolition of exchange restrictions is an essential condition to world recovery. For this purpose, the Governments concerned must take the internal measures necessary to secure the stability of their budgets and of their economic systems.

All seek to sell but not to buy. Such a policy must lead inevitably to an increasing paralysis of international trade.

HARMSEN ENTERS HALL OF FAME; A. O. H. LOSES

"Johnny" Harmsen entered the mythical hall of fame on the Edgely diamond yesterday when he set down the Bristol Hibernians without a run or hit in an eight-inning game. Edgely won the game, 4-0.

Harmsen was in excellent shape. His fast ball had the Bristol hitters popping up at all times and only four balls being hit to the outfielders. Harmsen fanned five batters and passed five. The only error committed on the Edgely team was made by the twirler himself, his mates giving him wonderful support.

"France" Dougherty and Gene Lawler did the pitching for the "Hibees" and both pitched good enough to win an ordinary ball game, giving the Edgely team but five hits between them. Two of these were doubles from the bat of "Eddie" Fields.

DAMP WASH TROUNCES JEFFERSON A. C., 13-0

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

Schedule for tonight
ST. ANN'S vs. JEFFERSON A. C.
(St. Ann's Field)

The Damp Wash A. A. scored their second win in succession in the Bristol Twilight League by trouncing the Jefferson A. C., 13-0, on St. Ann's field yesterday.

The winners made a total of fourteen safe blows and scored eleven runs in the first two innings, seven in the first and four in the second.

Meanwhile, "Tex" Dries was hurling in fine style for the Damp Washers and was handing goose-eggs to the Jefferson hitters. He allowed the losers five hits and kept them well scattered. Only one Jefferson runner reached third base. Dries fanned nine batters.

"Hershe" Culbertson started on the hill for the Jefferson Club and did not last the first inning. The Washers got to him and before he could retire the side seven runs had crossed the plate and three more runners were resting on the paths. McCurry went to the hill and retired the side without further scoring but in the second run into a bunch of trouble and four more tallies went to the Damp Wash total. McCurry hurled well after the second inning.

"Tex" Dries led the Damp Wash hitters with four hits in four trips to the plate. In his other appearance, he was passed. Kantor, Fuoco, and Leighton had two bingles each.

The playing of L. Tomlinson and Keating stood out for the losers.

Veterans Pay Tribute To Deceased Comrades

presentation of medals to two pupils of the eighth grade of Hulmeville school, featured the Memorial Day exercises at Beechwood Cemetery yesterday afternoon.

The afternoon's program commenced with a parade through the borough to the cemetery, with Jesse W. Soby Post, 148, American Legion; Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Cubs, school children, and other patriotic organizations in line. Music was provided by the St. Francis Industrial School Band of Eddington.

Preceding program at the speakers' stand a brief ceremony was held at the grave of the late Jesse W. Soby who was killed in action in France. A salute was fired by post members, and taps sounded.

The numbers at the stand included: Music, "America"; prayer, the Rev. Gilbert; remarks, Burgess Samuel J. Illick; cornet solo, Kimbel Faust; Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, Edward Campbell, South Langhorne; cornet solo, Kimbel Faust; address, Rev. Gilbert; presentation of American Legion medals; singing, "Star-Spangled Banner," assemblage, led by B. Howard Frishmuth; benediction, the Rev. T. W. Smith. Mrs. Faust acted as accompanist for her son; and Miss Clara L. Illick was accompanist for the numbers by the audience.

The recipients of the American Legion Medals, presented on behalf of the Soby Post, by Commander Joseph Zalot, were: Miss Letty Everitt and Lester Frantz. These were awarded for honor, courage, scholarship, leadership and service. In presenting the awards Mr. Zalot told that the symbols represented the heart of the American Legion and the Legion's chief reasons for existence. He told of the Legion's interest in youth and the future manhood and womanhood of the nation; and complimented the two eighth grade students on being chosen for the awards.

"It seems to me that a day of this sort is pregnant with life—a host of those who have gone on," stated the Rev. Gilbert in the opening portion of his address. "And somehow it seems as if those who faithfully served their country are aware of the tribute that you bring, of your humble devotion."

Speaking of the unrest and upheaval of the present time, the minister added: "I believe that the world today is fighting one of the greatest bloodless revolutions of our era," then added his belief that in spite of said unrest this machine age can assist all to a golden age. What is going to help us come out of our economic maladjustment is the same spirit that helped us to come out of the World War. Some men then gave themselves for a paltry wage, while others received unbelievable salaries. . . . My plea to you today is that you have faith in our leaders; not just watch and pray, but we have to place trust in our industrial and political leaders, trusting through God they will bring us to a happier time. . . . Then in the years to come we can look forward to this span of years as a time when mankind moved forward."

The services here followed exercises by the Soby post and the band, with other patriotic organizations at Langhorne. The speaker at Langhorne Memorial House grounds was the Rev. Henry Cunningham, pastor of Langhorne Presbyterian Church. A parade through the streets of that borough was followed by serving of a luncheon to the veterans and band at the Memorial house.

South Langhorne school children and other residents of that borough joined in the exercises here.

New Stars of the Red Sox

By BURNLEY

Lloyd BROWN
SMART SOUTHPAW WHO WAS BOUGHT FROM ST. LOUIS BY THE RED SOX--

RICK FERRELL

ANY BALL PLAYERS FOR SALE?—I'LL BUY 'EM!

OWNER YAWKEY.. HE IS DETERMINED TO GIVE BOSTON A WINNER.

BURNLEY

WELL, it looks as if the Boston Red Sox are not going to be dominated for the rest of the American League any longer. Tom Yawkey, wealthy sportsman who bought the Boston franchise last winter, is apparently determined to make the Red Sox into a winning club, and this year he has already purchased a number of top notch ball players, just to show that he's not fooling.

Yawkey and Eddie Collins, his general manager, put over a ten-strike when they acquired "Rick" Ferrell, brilliant backstop, and Lloyd Brown, an experienced and capable southpaw, from the St. Louis Browns, for a reported price of $50,000.

Ferrell, who is the brother of Wes Ferrell, famous Cleveland moundsman, is a high-grade receiver who, in Eddie Collins' opinion, is second only to Bill Dickey of the Yankees among American League catchers. He is a good hitter, too, having batted for .315 last year and .300 in 1931.

Lefty Lloyd Brown is a smart southpaw with lots of stuff, though he is none too strong and needs plenty of rest between starts. He figures to win plenty of games for Marty McManus' gang if he handled right.

Not content with having forked over half a hundred grand for these two stars, Yawkey went ahead and purchased George Piggras, Bill Werber and "Dusty" Cooke from the Yankees, and this time the price tag was reputed to be $75,000—which is a lot of dough, any way you look at it.

Piggras has been one of the Yankee mound aces for some years, and when he is right he is a mighty good hurler. Wildness has been his trouble in the past, but at any rate he is probably a better pitcher than any man on the Boston staff at present.

Werber is a very promising young infielder who looked so good with the Yankees this spring that it seemed for a time as if he would take the shortstop job away from Crosetti. For some unknown reason, however, McCarthy soured on him, and now he is getting his big chance with the revamped Red Sox.

Cooke, a speedy outfielder and a splendid hitter, was acquired from Newark. Dusty has been troubled with a lame arm for the past year or so, but this spring the bum wing appeared to have come around all right. If his arm doesn't go haywire again, he should be a big help to the Red Sox.

Italy's Air Armada Poised for Chicago Hop

With men and machines tuned to concert pitch, General Italo Balbo, Italian Air Minister, is holding his flock of twenty-four seaplanes and their crews of nearly one hundred men in readiness at Orbetello, Italy, for the start of the great mass formation flight to Chicago. The flight, probably the greatest venture in aviation history, is Premier Benito Mussolini's tribute to the Century of Progress Exposition. The starting date for the take-off was originally set for May 24, but weather conditions necessitated a postponement. Now, owing to ice conditions at the northern section of the route, the flight probably will be delayed until June 15 at the earliest. The route will take the roaring squadron from Orbetello to Amsterdam, Holland, thence to Londonderry, Ireland, whence it will make a sea hop to Reykjavik, Iceland. Refueling here, the armada will thunder on to Cartwright, Labrador, thence to Quebec, Canada, and down the home stretch formed by the Great Lakes to Chicago.

ORBETELLO, Italy, . . . Keyed up to concert pitch by a rigorous course of special training they have been undergoing for many months, nearly one hundred stalwart youths of Italy's flying army are eagerly straining at the leash here, anxious to be off on their great adventure—probably the greatest project in the history of aviation.

They are the fliers who count themselves fortunate in being included in the gallant band that will participate in Premier Benito Mussolini's great gesture to honor the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago. In twenty-four giant seaplanes they will wing their way to the great fair, over stormy seas, mountains, valleys, lakes and rivers. There will be danger, True. But when did the prospect of danger fail to add spice to an adventure?

BALBO WILL LEAD
The great flying armada will be led by General Italo Balbo, Italian Air Minister, and one of his country's most famous fliers. The General was awarded the Harmon Trophy in 1931 for his achievements in the air, and already has a trans-Atlantic flight under his belt. Not only will General Balbo lead the flight, but he also has been in personal charge of the training of the men who will make the trip with him. For many months, these fliers have lived practically isolated at the naval air station here. Nothing has been left to chance to fit them for the hazardous game ahead. Both men and machines are at the peak of condition.

START IN JUNE

Originally the flight was intended to begin on May 24, the anniversary of Italy's entry into the World War, but fearing that the weather might be unfavorable, General Balbo postponed the start. It is thought that the flight may be further delayed owing to ice conditions at Reykjavik, Iceland, and that a start from Orbetello will not be made before June 15 at the earliest.

ROUTE OF FLIGHT

The first leg of the mass formation flight will be from Orbetello to Amsterdam, Holland, across Europe, during which General Balbo probably will follow the course of the River Rhine. Londonderry, Northern Ireland, will be the next stop, whence the great armada will wing over the North Atlantic to Reykjavik, Iceland. Refueling there, the twenty-four planes will thunder on their longest sea hop to Cartwright, Labrador, thence to Quebec, Canada, and up the home stretch formed by the Great Lakes to Chicago.

Barring accidents, the squadron should come to rest on Lake Michigan before the World's Fair grounds in between three and four days after the take-off from Orbetello.

SUCCESS INSURED

Not only has every man participating in the flight a notable record, but every plane will carry at least one man who made the previous flight to Brazil with General Balbo. The commander of each plane will have three aides; a copilot, a mechanic and a route officer. In five of the planes there will be a fifth man in charge of radio communication. Part of the job to be handled by the radio men is to keep in constant touch with the fleet of
